

Alex C. Intermill

Profile

Alex Intermill is a partner with Bose McKinney & Evans' Environmental Law, Alcoholic Beverage Law, and Governmental Services Groups. In his environmental law practice, he assists clients with state and federal environmental litigation, insurance recovery, administrative appeals, remediation and securing funds for environmental cleanup from the Excess Liability Trust Fund (ELTF), underground storage tank (UST) issues, NPDES permitting, wetland development, and the acquisition and sale of real property with environmental concerns. He also represents clients who have needs related to alcohol-permitting, including assisting with the procurement of alcohol permits, applying for permit transfers, responding to alleged violations, negotiating with excise police and ATC prosecutors, attending local board hearings and pursuing appeals of denials of permit applications. Additionally, he serves as town attorney for the town of Pendleton where he assists the town with various municipal issues such as annexation, development in the town's industrial park, zoning and land use, and utility matters. Mr. Intermill also has experience with OSHA- and state OSHA-related issues.

A 2004 graduate of Indiana University School of Law - Indianapolis, Mr. Intermill is admitted to practice law in the State of Indiana and before the United States District Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Indiana. Mr. Intermill is a member of the Indianapolis and Indiana State Bar Associations. Prior to pursuing his law degree he taught high school Spanish.
